

NATIONAL SUPPORT SCHOOL

Since 2011, one of our TTLT schools has been a recognised National Support School.

Paul Harris, the Executive Head Teacher is a National leader of Education.

We firmly believe that the best approach for schools to develop is through school to school support. Through this partnership, strong and sustainable changes can be made in the most effective way.

As part of the programme, the National Support School has supported many schools across London and from other parts of the country in a range of capacities and for different purposes. Some of these include:

- Pupil premium reviews
- Developing expertise
- School to school support and visits
- Management support
- School structural support
- School improvement - short term and long term assignments
- Head Teacher performance management
- Coping and managing building projects

Our work with other schools has proved to be highly successful and we have supported many to improve delivery resulting in increased educational outcomes. Several of the schools we have supported have also been able to upgrade their category for Ofsted with some schools moving from RI to outstanding. Each of the projects are bespoke, unique and tailored around the needs of development at each establishment.

If you would like any information on how we can help develop your school, please contact us to arrange the creation of a bespoke programme or provide reviews for you.