

"A place everyone loves to be"

National Sports Week Launch

On Monday 19th June Kensington primary helped to kick off National School Sports Week in style after Mr Levinson ran an ultra-marathon around his East London primary school.

Ben Levinson OBE has been Executive Head Teacher at Kensington Primary School, part of the Tapscott Learning Trust, since 2016 and completed the extraordinary challenge with support from Olympian Jess Piasecki, former two-weight Women's Thai-boxing world number one Rachael Mackenzie and Secretary of State for Education Gillian Keegan MP.

National School Sports Week is a campaign run by children's charity the Youth Sport Trust.

In a bid to drive up awareness of the Chief Medical Officers' guidance and boost children's physical activity levels, the charity is this week hoping to get more children 'playing for fun, playing for 60' between 19 and 25 June.

Originally launched in 2008 by the Youth Sport Trust, National School Sports Week attempts to champion the role of PE, physical activity, and school sports in allowing all pupils to reach their full potential.

And after a visit from the secretary of state, completing an ultra-marathon and wishing his year six students well on their residential trip, it is fair to say Levinson deserves a rest.

Prospective families are welcome to arrange visits at any time.
